

Autism online training

Free to organisations in Worcestershire

Worcestershire County Council has worked with the National Autistic Society to provide learners with a selection of our autism online training modules.

Learners can choose the modules that are right for them and their job role. The training will help to increase their knowledge of autism and help them offer the best support to autistic customers and colleagues.

For more information please visit

 www.autism.org.uk/wcc

Delivered on behalf of Available modules are:

Understanding autism

Learn about the unique strengths and attributes of autistic people as well as some of the common difficulties they face. This module provides information on how to make environments more enabling for autistic people.

Autism and communication

Learn about variations in use of language and communication and also factors that can impact on (successful) communication. This module also provides information on how to recognise and respond to the natural communication preferences of autistic people.

Autism and sensory experience

Learn about differences in how people on the autism spectrum process information and the impact of sensory differences on everyday life for autistic people.

Autism in the workplace

Specifically for employers and colleagues of autistic people

Learn about difficulties autistic people may experience in the workplace and discover potential causes of anxiety. This module also identifies and gives recommendations on implementing reasonable adjustments to support autistic colleagues.

For more information please visit

www.autism.org.uk/wcc

The National Autistic Society is a charity registered in England and Wales (269425) and in Scotland (SC039427).